Communication Plan

Effective communication doesn't just happen, it needs to be planned carefully! But this idea alone can be dauting.

- Where do I start?
- How do I do this?
- Why do I even need this?

Well, let's start with the WHY?

Every NGO wants to tell the world about the work it's doing. But, more often than not, the world won't listen.

That's why you need a communication plan.

A communication plan will help you and your organization get your message out and gather the attention it deserves. In an organized and well thought way.

103 - Training package for social and green NGO leadershipModule 6

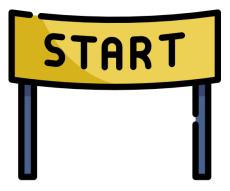

Where do I start?

To start you, as an NGO, need to define your vision.

- What is the big change you want to make?
- What is your mission?

These are the two questions that will help you set the tone you will use in your communication.

Your communication might take 10, 20 or 30 years to gather the attention you deserve. You should create 2-year communications plan to keep it up to date.

Where do I start?

Be SMART

After defining your vision, you need to create your objectives. Your objectives should be SMART:

- Specific
- Measurable
- Attainable
- Realistic
- Time-bound

Vision	Objective
Save the environment	Increase the number of households recycling in our community by five percent this year.

Where do I start?

Internal Scan

An internal scan assesses your organization's assets and challenges.

- What staff, resources and tools do you have?
- Is your organization a media machine or is it comprised of academics?
- Are you well known?
- Are you part of any coalition or partnership?

Where do I start?

External Scan

An external scan helps you understand external factors that might impact your communication

- What is the current state of the debate around your issue?
- Are there key events you must factor?
- What other organizations are working, either with or against, your issue?
- Are there misconceptions around your issue?
- What obstacles or opportunities might you encounter?

Where do I start?

External Scan

Is there no discussion around your key issue?

Then you have the opportunity to be the first to frame it.

Although the understanding of your issue might be difficult, because it's new, you have the opportunity to be the first one to define it.

Is there already a discussion?

Are you winning it?

Fortify and amplify!

Are you losing?

Reframe!

For example, if the discussion is being centered around "Should we save the planet?", you can reframe it to "How can we save the planet?"

Strategy Target Audience

Now that you know where to start, it's time to define your target audience.

These are a few points you must consider:

- Age
- Location
- Interests

You can use social media analytics to better understand your current audience and either cater to it or understand what you need to change to reach a different one.

Hint: your audience should not be "everyone". Work towards a niche group and dominating it.

Strategy Choose your platform

You now know your target audience, so it's time to choose your preferred social media platform.

- Audiences between the ages 12 and 17 are more active on Twitter and Snapchat.
- Audiences between the ages of 18 and 29 are more active on Facebook, Snapchat and Instagram.
- Audiences between the ages of 30 and 65+ are more active on Facebook.

So choose carefully your main venue for communication. You don't need to be an exclusive user of a single social media platform, but you should focus your efforts where your audience is.

Strategy Measure Analytics

Almost every social media platform offers you a place to view and study your analytics (e.g. Facebook Insights, Twitter Analytics)

Use this tool to get to know better your audience and its habits.

- At what time are they online?
- Do they react more to text, pictures or videos?
- Are they more likely to share original content, editorials or inspiring testimonies?

You can also these tools to measure performance.

- How many people are like or sharing your posts;
- How many people are seeing your content;

Facebook

Starter Guide

If you already have a following take advantage of Facebook Insights to understand when is your audience online to know when to post. If you are starting, make several posts over the course of a week and then head to the Insights to get this information.

Using these insights you can start planning your posts.

Make sure you post twice a day at times where your audience is peaking.

You can use the Facebook schedule tool to get some content ready to be posted without you needing to come every single time to the page or you can use an external software such as Buffer, Swonkie or Hootsuite.

Twitter is the best place to go informal with your audience.

Don't be worried with posting long and formal content because Twitter is the right place to directly engage with your audience.

Don't forget engagement is important in every single platform, but some platforms offer a more chilled approach (Twitter/Instagram) and others require a more professional one (Facebook/LinkedIn).

WEBSITE Your vision

Your vision should be the page where you present your organizations exactly that.

Remember we have already defined your vision before?

What is the big change you want to achieve? What is your mission?

This is the place to further develop what you answered and explain it to your audience.

Remember: it should be easy to read and follow!

WEBSITE Donations

A website is the perfect place to gather donations for your NGO.

After all, you have just presented your organization, your vision, and your mission.

Luckily, if you have done this work in a well-thought and SMART way, your audience has connected with you and your organization and wants to take part and help you by donating.

WEBSITE Analytics

On your website, you can use Google Analytics to track your audience and get to know it better.

You'll be able to know their age, sex, location, what pages they visited, how long they stayed and the ways they navigate your website.

Keep in mind: this tracking must follow GDPR guidelines.

MAILING LIST Why?

Your website will inform and educate your audience about your organization.

But email will inspire and invite them to volunteer and donate over an extended period of time.

You can send newsletters, advocacy messages or fundraising appeals.

But you need to collect and maintain good data on your audience.

How?

MAILING LIST

Take advantage of your website to collect mail addresses from your audience.

Use tools like Mailchimp to collect email addresses, but also names, this way you can personalize each email towards every person.

Whether writing your emails or gathering audience, make it personal. Create call to actions that provoke clicks, like "Yes, I WANT to save the world!"

Make sure your signup forms are simple. The simpler they are, the more people will signup as they won't waste time. But beware, simple doesn't mean you can skip on getting the information you need. Just make sure you don't run a full background check.

MAILING LIST

While collecting personal data, do not forget about the General Data Protection Regulation. There are 5 things you must never forget:

- Consent requires a positive opt-in. Don't use pre-ticked boxes.
- Keep consent requests separate from other terms & conditions.
- Make it easy for people to withdraw consent—and tell them how to do it.
- Keep evidence of consent—who, when, how.
- Check your consent practices and your existing consents.

Thank you very much for your attention!
