What is the purpose of the NGENvironment project and what are its benefits from the perspective of Malta?

NGOs serve as drivers of positive change, especially in terms of raising environmental awareness. Yet, the establishment of such an organisation is a challenging one. This is where the project “NGEnvironment” comes in. It aims to promote sustainability and active citizenship throughout Europe. Both of these values are essential towards the development of current and potential NGO leaders. NGENvironment wishes to strengthen the positions of NGOs on the European front, and also to ensure that they hold a place in the decision-making processes of tomorrow.

Malta hosts a number of NGOs, all involved in the advocacy of a range of issues. Thereby, the values of sustainability and citizenship are respected within Maltese society. Yet, progress is still far off. Whilst it is worth mentioning that there are great leaders on the island, they are few in number. The NGENvironment project has the potential of improving these figures through the provision of training; to those who wish to become NGO leaders or entrepreneurs, as well as existing NGO staff to receive lifelong training and share their expertise. The end-result would not just be the significant development of participants’ skills and knowledge, but also that of their respective organisations and Maltese society as a whole.

Our role at AcrossLimits is to serve as contributors to the changing face of activism. That is; through educating participants on becoming active citizens, nurturing them to hone their leadership skills, and creating awareness on the challenges which environmental NGOs face.

AcrossLimits specialises in the application of technology to various areas of daily life. Hence, we are very excited to provide our expertise to the NGENvironment project and support our local and European NGOs.
