About The Project

- Description of the project available in all partner languages

NGOs play a crucial role in the wellbeing of mankind and their relevance as promoters of positive change in the world is undeniable.

However, starting an NGO is usually a lengthy, time consuming process that arises many doubts and uncertainties, which can more often than not, result in potential leaders to give up or to join any other entity that already exists, even if it does not entirely fulfil the person's view or goals.

We believe the difficulties of the process to start an NGO can be minimized by following a consistent series of steps and seeking advice. This is where the NGEnvironment Project steps in.

NGEnvironment seeks to promote active citizenship and sustainability among adults in Europe. The entities involved which include 8 different European cities, will create a multitude of different tools to train potential and current NGO leaders. Project participants will have the opportunity to improve their skills and basic competencies in leadership, citizenship and NGO management whilst also being given the opportunity to support green and social actions.
