Recycling is a great step towards ensuring that toxic waste does not end up in the landfills. An electronics recycling business is a great area as old computers, mobile phones, fax machines as well as outdated television sets can be used to produce items that can be used elsewhere. You can also consider offering a pickup service for such electronics and deliver them to recyclers at a fee even though you may not offer actual recycling services.

Entrepreneurial competence

The proven ability to use knowledge, skills and personal, social and/or methodological abilities, in work or study situations, and in professional and personal development.

Entrepreneurial competence

- As mentioned above, transversal knowledge, skills and competences are relevant to a broad range of occupations and economic sectors. They are often referred to as core, basic or soft skills and are the cornerstone for the personal development of a person. Within the skills pillar, transversal skills and competences are organised in a hierarchical structure with the following five headings:
 - thinking
 - language
 - application of knowledge
 - social interaction
 - attitudes and values

Source: <https://ec.europa.eu/esco/portal/document/el/0a89839c-098d-4e34-846c-54cbd5684d24>

Entrepreneurial competence

➤ Example:

Working as a "commercial pilot" requires the competence to combine knowledge about "geographic areas" and "air transport law" with skills relating to "read maps" and "execute flight plans".

Entrepreneurial competence

Skill:

- refers to the use of methods or instruments in a particular setting and in relation to defined tasks.

Competence:

- is broader and refers to the ability of a person, facing new situations and unforeseen challenges, to use and apply knowledge and skills in an independent and self-directed way.

→ However, there is no distinction between skills and competences recorded in the ESCO skills pillar.
